Coca Cola Pill Box

Diann's Story (eBay ID: dcluttersales)

I was on my way to an estate sale at the beginning of August and got attracted to a great sign for a garage sale. I had the time and went a bit out of my way to the garage sale that was more garage than stuff. It was awkward as there were no people there and hardly any stuff. I felt like I needed to buy something since this young man was sitting looking very hopeful.

I looked at the few jewelry items on the table and decided I could spend a dollar to feel good about leaving (It's hard for me not to buy something when garage sales take so much time to put on – That's why I do not do them!)

Anyway, I saw this pill box with a Coke bottle in rhinestones that was in a little plastic bag. I immediately thought, 'Aha! People collect Coca Cola trinkets.' I didn't even look closely and see that rhinestones were missing!

Well, I looked it over when I got home and saw the missing rhinestones. I thought I had just thrown away $1, but I looked up the name Kathrine Baumann that was on the inside and 'lo and behold,' her things were selling on eBay very nicely.

I listed it with a $9.98 starting bid. A bidding war broke out and it sold for $89.88! The interesting thing was that I was so excited as several were bidding and about halfway through the week, I went to an eBay meeting that we have here in the Seattle area, and the woman running the meeting was one of the bidders! A great $1 spent!
